Apartments in Alameda

Lincoln University offers student housing options. Currently, the university provides affordable shared dormitory style housing in the city of Alameda. The rent is starting from $845 per person monthly. These apartments are maintained and furnished by Lincoln University. The monthly rent includes the utilities, high-speed internet and renter's insurance. The apartment complexes offer controlled access, laundry facilities, and are located near a bus stop within a short commuting distance from Lincoln University. Some students choose to use housing websites and independent rental agencies to find apartments by themselves, share them with other student, or live with relatives and friends.

The Department of Student Services posts notices about current rental options on the LU website and a housing board to inform students of various temporarily housing resources until students acquire accommodation on their own.
